MEETING OF UNIONIST LIBERALS.

LONDON, 5th August. A meeting of the Unionist members of the Liberal party was held to-day at Devoushire House to consider their policy in the forth-coming session. The Marquis of Hartington deprecated any hostility towards the followers of Mr. Gladstone, and expressed the opinion that when Parliament opened the Unionists should mingle with the other members of the Liberal party, which would then present a united front on all questions except that of Irish legislation. Mr. Chamberlain spoke to the same effect, and the course of action proposed was approved of by the meeting generally.

IMPERIAL PEDERATION.

LONDON, 12th August.

Sir Thomas Brassey to-day presented to Lord Salisbury a deputation from the Imperio Federation League. Amongst them were many prominent colonists. The deputation arged upon the Premier the advisableness of summoning conference, or appointing a Royal Commission, which should include delegates from all the polonies, for the purpose of suggesting the means of taking concerted notion for the defence of the Empire in time of war, and for the promotion of commercial, postal, and telegraphic interconrain time of peace; also for generally securing closer federation or union in all parts of the Empire. Mr. Service, of Victoria, stated he was present not in any official capacity. He attended on account of the strong interest he felt in the unity of the Empire. He somewhat bitterly alluded to the way in which hor Majasty's Government formerly neglected the interests of the clonies, or sacrificed them to Imperial interests; but he expressed the hope that there would be a complete change now. Mr. Service was grateful to the Imperial Government for the action taken in regard to the recent landing of the French in the New Hebrides. The German annexation of a portion of New Guinea cansed great bitterness in the colonies. Any Government capable of negotiating, so that France and Germany would go out of the New Hebrides and New Caledonia, would do more to bind Australia to the mother country than anything else. Mr. Service expressed hisapproval of the coursetaken by the Government regarding colonial defences, to which the colonies would readily contribute. The Marquis of Salisbury stated he was quable to answer on his own authority. He must consult his colleagues. He had been much impressed by the growth of the federation movement both at home and in the colonies. Although no definite proposals had yet been made, he expressed his belief that the abstention from the formulation of a scheme was the wisest course at present. It would be a mistake to consider the movement unreal, and he believed the contrary would soon find practical expression. Her Majesty's Government would always keep the desire of federation before them. Lord Salisbury expressed his approval of the views of Captain Colomb, regarding naval federation. Her Majesty's Government would consult the colonial governments on the subject. The Premier considered Mr. Service's remarks as to New Guines and New Caledonia outside the field of practical politics, but he praised the energy displayed by the colonies for defence.
